The Receipts of Stock at the Wichita Union Stock Yards for the Past 24 Hours were: Cattle, 53; Hogs, 1404. Shipments: Cattle, 58; Hogs, 259.

WICHITA, Feb. 11. The cattle supply was light today and the receipts contained nothing choice. There were no high sales like yesterday, as there was nothing as fancy on the market today. The bulk of the sales were made at stendy prices today. Fat steers are dull, and are selling lower at present. Everything was sold and the yards cleared. The quidations core presented are to give the shipper an idea of the general range of prices. Fresh receipts today, 1,404. The market opened slow with a supply of good hogs. Buyers and sellers were spart for some time. The packers insisted on buying cheaper, claiming that they had bought hogs too high yesterday. The bulk of the sales were made 5 cents lower than yesterday afternoon's sales and about 10 cents ower than the early business of yesterday Everything on sale was sold and the mar ket closed with the yards cleared.

of sales today, $4.30 to $4.37%. Tops, $4.40 REPRESENTATIVE SALES. The following are the representative sales of bogs at the rands today:

SHEEP.

Brief Mention. The receipts were fair for Thursday. There was a light run in the cattle division today. Both pagkers were in the field today and took about an equal number of hogs. J. D. Gilchrist of Vailey Center was a visitor at the yards today. He is one of the Gilchrist Bros, the well-known stock men and shippers of Valley Center. He reports things as in good shape in his part

Clark Pollard, a well-known stock man from Sedgwick, was at the yards today. He came in with hogs and disposed of them at good figures. He is well pleased with this market and ships here regularly. Mr. Pollard is quite extensively engaged

BISHOP AND CZAR.

A STALWART PRELATE WHO WOULD NOT OBEY HIS MAJESTY.

The Ruccius Pishog Ambruise, of Pensa Gave Bis Ruler 's Terrifle Reception on the Occasion of a Distinguished Visit-He Made the Czar Obey.

Bishop Ambroise was an extraordinary man, renowned for the firmness of his character, the depth of his erudition and the narrowness of his views. The son of a simple deacon, he ewed his elevation to his oratorical talent, his his torical works, and especially his ascetic virtues. He lived in his episcopal palace with the austere habits that had endeared him to the people. He dressed like a simple peasant, lived in a cell in his palace, and his principal diet connisted of cabbage and radishes. In fact he fared like the poorest moujik; but for all that he had the strength of a giant. His salary of 8,000 or 10,000 roubles he distributed among the poor, giving right and left, and never refusing charity to the hosts of beggars that always swarmed around him. in 1821, Alexander I announced that

Full sets of teeth $5, $8, he intended to visit Pensa; but if he knew the reception that was in store for him he would have tried some other town. The governor sent the chief of police to the bishop to request him to clean his palace before the arrival of the

"All right," the bishop said, "I can get the mud in front of the place cleared away, but where can I hide your head and the governor's head? It would be useless to bury them in the ground; the odor of your actions would still perme ate the whole place."

Of course the two officials were furious. but there was no help for them; Ambroise was too powerful. When the czar arrived the governor gave orders to the archbishop to come with all his clergy and receive the emperor at the front entrance to the cathedral; but that was just what he would not do. He massed his clergy with all their banners at a side door on the southern side. To the remonstrances of the governor he replied. "I am the archbishop, and I alone give YANKING THE CZAR UPSTAIRS.

The civil authorities were grouped at the front entrance. The czar, naturally enough, went to the place where the banners were. There were some rather steep steps in front of the side door and the czar complained that his legs were weak and that he would prefer to enter the church through some other door.

"Nonsense!" the bishop exclaimed. The weakness of your legs doesn't prevent you from dancing. Come!" Seizing him by the arm the powerful bishop yanked his majesty up the steps. At the threshold the czar bent down to kiss the image that the priest presented to him, but to the utter astonishment of the crowd, the bishop, still holding him by the arm, forced him to bow down almost to the ground. The czar thought that was enough, so he again attempted to kiss the image. "No! three times!" said the bishop. The czar had to obey and how twice more before he was per mitted to kiss the holy image. That, however, was only the beginning of his troubles. After having heard the To Deum in the cathedral, the czar retired to the apartments that had been carefully prepared for him by the governor, and was about to enjoy his first nap when all the bells of the churches burst out with a terrific clangor. The archbishop, accompanied by his chapter and an immense crowd, all chanting loud enough to take the roof off, presented himself before the governor's residence and announced his intention to purify the rooms occupied by the czar by sprinkling them with holy water. Alexander I sent his adjutant to the terrible of references. Address Box 20, Wichita, han. prelate to tell him that his majesty was "You are the adjutant of the czar of and the mighty bishop grabbed him by the collar, tossed him back thirty feet in ARRIVS | LEAVE | the rear and walked majestically into the czar's room. "I will have you arrested," the governor shouted, in a furious rage. "There is not power enough in the

Alexander had to submit. His rooms were thoroughly sprinkled, after which he was compelled to listen to an interminable sermon on the evils of self love and the passion for luxury. On leaving the emperor the archbishop proceeded once more to the cathedral for the evening office. At 10 o'clock the bells rang potentate. So an hour later the bells began a dreadful racket for the third time.

The next morning his majesty had to review his troops, and, as he wished to the control of the control hear mass first, he dispatched his adjustant to the bishop with an order to celebrate mass at 6 o'clock and make day. church."

He kept his word. The czar, and his troops had to wait. Of course his majesty had his revenge. Ambroise was dismissed from his office and retired to a monastery, but that did not trouble him, for he had lived while archbishop like the poorest monk in all Russia.—

The question as to the fatigue metals under long continued stress has been tested and, it is believed, satisfactorily settled, in the treatment of two similar suspension bridge links and the results obtained. A square fron link 12 inches wide, I inch thick and about 13 feet long was taken from a bridge at Kieff, Russia, then about forty years old, and tested against a similar link which had lain unused in store ever since the building of the bridge. Under these circumstances the means of comparison were considered in the highest degree favorable, and the result necessarily of a reliable character in determining whether or not iron actually loses, and to what extent, any of its strength in prolonged service.

The effect of the test showed for the old used link an ultimate tensile strength of 21.8 tons per square inch, an elastic limit of 11.1 tons per square inch, an elongation of 14.5 per cent., and a contraction of 17:35 per cent. at the point of fracture. In the case of the unused link, the tensile strength was found to be 22.2 tons per square inch, with an elastic limit of 11.9 tons, and an elongation and contraction at fracture of 18.42 per cent. and 18.75 per cent., respectively. From this it appears, therefore, that the two pieces of iron were of practically identical strength -- the small difference actually observed being well within the ordinary range of variability of similar pieces of such motal - New York Sun

You and other strangers have the walks all to yourselves. The public stages are withdrawn. But for the rolling wheels of hotel and livery backs that cart visitors to and from the park you might shut your eyes and fancy yourself in some silent cemetery.-New York Herald for himself in the educational system of Germany is certainly most impressive. This place of responsibility and infinence is not newly acquired. It is an inheritance from the past; a transmission of powers won by the courage, seal and intellectual strength of the teachers of three centuries. Beginning with the reformation-the time from which the present school system of Germany dates -the teacher has filled a prominent place in all educational reforms.

and Sturm, of Ratich, Comenius and Pestalozzi, and of a host of others, not only in promulgating new philosophies and methods of teaching, but in putting into practice new courses of study, in calling out for education the active interest of princes and people and, wherever it was necessary, in shaping legisla tion relating to education both high and
